

Paper Sun Films' first feature set for world premiere.

London, September 6th 2011: FORGET PARIS, the debut feature from writer/director Christopher Presswell (Missed Connections), is set to receive its world premiere at London's Raindance Film Festival.

Dan and Katie's plans for a romantic new year's getaway to Paris are ruined in the months leading to their departure when their relationship implodes, leaving Dan heartbroken.

With the festive season fast approaching, they choose to proceed with the holiday as friends. But emotions run high amidst the nightmare scenario, which Dan sees as his last chance to win back the love of his life.

The film stars Ed Coleman (Teenage Kicks, Bones) as the broken hearted Dan, alongside newcomer Mai Cunningham as Katie.

Filmed in London and Paris, the production team were actually rolling at the stroke of midnight on December 31st, allowing them only one chance to get the film's climatic new year sequence in the can.

The screening will take place at the Apollo Piccadilly Circus on Friday October 7th 2011, and booking opens on Friday 9th September.

More information about the festival and screening can be found on Raindance's website (www.raindance.co.uk), and high resolution stills will be available shortly from www.papersunfilms.co.uk/press.
